WAS ONLY A PRIVATE

But Hundreds Attended His Funeral.

HIS REMAINS SENT HOME

Mr. Vernon and Miss Atkinson Married Elizabeth City, N. C., Sunday. Cart McGill's Narrow Escape

When George E. Golden bade farewell to his mountain home in Maryland, a few weeks ago, and marched away to the war, he did not think that the scal of death would be set upon his brow long before he was called upon to meet the foe. But so it was, for on Sunday, while the shadows of evening were gathering over land and sea, his body was borne away from the camp to be sent back to the gird stricken cottage in the Alleghanies. Five hundred men, marching to solemn funeral music by the post band, accompanied his remains to the Washington steamer. The scene was a sad one. Company C, of which the deceased was a member, marched immediately behind the hearse. Then came nearly every soldier in the Fourth regiment, Maryland Volunteers. At the dock, where the steamer was waiting, a dozen armed men forced the people back and, after making a passageway to the gang plank, formed in line on either slide of it and waited for the casket to be borne past. The mourner—there was but one—followed. It was George Gordon's father, a man of fifty years, who rode with bowed head in a carrlage by himself. Hundreds of people scanned the sad face as the vehicle slowly rolled by and the eyes of more than one were dimmed by moisture. Some who looked upon those as dear to them as this dead boy was to that sorrow-stricken father and the weeping mother in her distant mountain home waiting to look into his cold, dead face. Would there be such a bitter home coming of their loved ones? Heaven forbid.

George Gordon died of meningitis, but it is said that he was ill when the regiment reached Fort Monroe. Yesterday afternoon a story was afloat to the effect that his comrades had tossed him in an army blanket, and that by accident he fell and suffered scrious injury to his spine. This is doubtless untrue, however. At any rate, it is strongly denied, by members of other companies. It is said that he was ill when the regiment reached Fort Monroe. Yesterday afternoon a story was afloat to the effect that his comrades had tossed him in an army blanket, and was but nineteen years old and would be alive and well today has he heeder the advice of his parents. The remains were accompanied to Cumberland by a corporal and four privates of Company C.

NO UNCLE IN THIS.

Mr. Vernon and Miss Atkinson Married Sunday.

Hampton, already famous for clonements, added another to the list on Sunday morning, when Mr. Marion Vernon and Miss Berta Atkinson, young people well known here, gave the locksmith the slip and by noon were in Elizabeth City, N. C., where they were made husband and wife. Mr. Vernon is employed in the dry goods establishment of Webb & Mears, in the dress making department of which Miss Atkinson held a position under her sister, who conducts it. It has been known for a long time that the young people were fond of each other, but all doubts upon that point were removed when, not a great while ago, they were foiled in an attempt to clope.

Mr. Vernon still lacks a year of his majority. His father and mother are dead and the young man was left to the care of an uncle, who, it appears, disapproved of the marriage on account of the groom's age. The stern a year, when he will come into possession of a farm bequenthed to him by his parents. There was no objection to the match on the part of the young ladys family.

It was expected that Mr. and Mrs. Vernon would return yesterday, but at 6 o'clock Mr. Vernon had not been to the store.

A RED HOT SUNDAY.

Ninety-seven in the Shade at One O'clock.
Sunday was one of the hottest days experienced here for years. The people were roasted during the whole twenty-four hours. Yesterday was about as bad. Old Sol's first beams on Sunday morning furnished unmistakable evidence of what he intended to do before night came to relieve his sweltering night came to relieve his sweltering yietims. He was ably assisted in his torrid enterprise by General Humidity, who carried the joke, on his part, just as far as he could without causing a shower.

when first observed Old Sol had wor-shower.

When first observed Old Sol had worried the mercury up to 86 in the shade, with General Humidity steaming along in hot pursuit. It was a neck race until 1 o'clock, when the themometer at Mahone's drug store registered 57 and yelled enough. Then things began to cool off a little and by night with the mercury at 86 and a prospective shower in sight, the parbolled public began to declare that it felt reasonably comfortable, a whopper which, under almost any other circumstances, would be considered an unpardonable sin.

Yesterday the mercury fell two degrees short of Sunday's record, 95 being the highest notch reached. An easterly breeze skurried over the city in the afternoon and brought a welcome respite from the scorching heat which was poured out until 1 o'clock. But when night came the breeze died out and people prepared themselves to stew until daylight. Almost any kind of a storm would have been welcome last nightnot a cyclone nor a tornado, of course, but a good, big blow, such as does no serious damage.

death in this city at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Carl, with his father am little brother, was returning from Ot Point. He sat on the end of the seat the very place at which a little boy ought not to be, and therefore the very position which little boys always insist upon occupying.

As the car struck the Marsh Market curve, which is a very sharp one, Car was the was thrown headlong to the street. That was bad enough, but it was not the most alarming feature of the accideath.

Officer Joe Diestil, who witnessed the accident from his house, ran out and pitched the hoy up. He had an ugly bruise on his head and another on his nose. Mrs. Diestil bathed the little fellow's wounds, however, and soon had him fairty well enough to resume his hoursey.

"GROWING UP" IN JAPAN.

"GROWING UP" IN JAPAN.

The Boy Becomes of Age at 15 Years, and Is Given a New Name. (St. Nicholas.)

When he is three years old, he begins to wear the obl, a girdle three inches wide, which confines the kimono, a loose sort of garment, and the main part of the Japanese national dress, for both children and grown people. The putting on of the obl is the occasion of another family feast; and a very important garment it is, for it corresponds to pockets in an American boy's first trousers. The front part of the kimono, above the obl, is also used as a pocket, and the long, white sleeves, sewed up at the lower end, make two very big ones.

When fifteen years old, the boy becomes of age, and a third family occurs. Another name is given him, and his hair is allowed to grow all over his head, like a man's. Previous to this time the head is shaved so as to allow the hair to grow only in spots or turts, the place of the tuffs varying up to the these titles, san, sama, always follow the name, and are never perfixed as with our "Mr." For example, a boy whose name is Kiyoshi will be called Kiyoshi-san. In his responses to the kind speeches made to him, the boy shows that he understands the new honors that have come upon him, and that he is now ready to apply himself to the serious business of life.

It used to be a great thing to be born a samural (sah-moo-ri) hoy baby in Japan. The samural were soldiers and scholars, and were entirely apart from and above the ordinary people. They could not engage in any business, nor could they marry into another class. This has all been changed since the Japanese revolution of 1857-63. The people are now divided into two large classes—the heimin (ha-meen, or commoners), the shizoku (shee-zo-koo, or gentry)—and all have equal rights under the law. The average boy's success in life depends upon his own abilities, and the use he makes of c teaching he may have.

TWO GUARDS REPORTED DEAD.
A Rumor That Caused Much Anxiety
Here.
A rumor, which could be traced to no reliable source, to the effect that Corporal Carver and Private Oldfield, members of Company D. (the Peninsula Guards) had died in Jacksonville from sunstroke, was circulated here yesterday. Scores of people went to work to run down the report, but none could be found from whom information could be obtained as to whence
